MRS. BUSH TELLS OTHER WOMEN

How Pains in Side and Dragging Down Feelings Were Relieved by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Massena, N.Y.—"I had terrible pains in both my sides and a dragging-down feeling that affected me so that I could hardly walk, and I got run-down. A friend who had taken Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound advised me to try it and I have taken it with the best results. I do my housework and also some outdoor work on the farm."

The Vegetable Compound has given me back my health and I can not praise it enough. I am perfectly willing that you should use these facts if my letter will help other women who still suffer."

—Mrs. DELBERT BUSH, R. F. D. 1, Massena, N.Y.

The spirit of helpfulness shown in the letters we are constantly publishing is worthy of notice.

These women know by experience what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will do. Your troubles are the same as theirs. Isn't it reasonable to expect the same results?

If you have pains and a dragging-down feeling and are nervous and irritable, profit by Mrs. Bush's experience and give the Compound a trial.

RED CROSS YEAR'S COST $21,366,255

Nearly $12,000,000 Devoted to Helping Victims of Great Japanese Earthquake.

OVER 3,000 BUSY CHAPTERS

Aid to Disabled War Veterans Paramount and Reaches Nearly $4,000,000.

Washington.—More than $21,000,000 was the total of funds expended in all activities of the American Red Cross during the last fiscal year, ended June 30, says a statement issued by the National organization. This expenditure was almost one-sixth of the amount of money disbursed by the Red Cross in the war year, July, 1917, to June, 1918. Of this extraordinary sum $11,631,303 was America's contribution to the Red Cross for relief of the Japanese earthquake victims. This was increased to $11,768,893 by appropriations from general funds of the Red Cross, and it represented probably the largest spontaneous outpouring of beneficence of a single nation in the history of the world.

Over 2,000 active Chapters expended during the year $4,869,000, the National organization disbursed $16,497,255.35, making the total $21,366,255.35—all for humanitarian work which reached practically around the world. In announcing the year's record of American Red Cross industry the executive officials at Washington emphasize the fact that the extensive and never-failing work of the Red Cross depends almost wholly upon the nation-wide support of the organization from the memberships enrolled during the annual roll call which this year will be in progress from Nov. 11 to 27, when everyone is asked to join or renew their membership in the American Red Cross.

Soldier Service Paramount

Service in behalf of the disabled veterans of the World War and their families is a paramount obligation of the Red Cross. The organization, through its Chapters, is constantly in touch with this duty in 2,609 communities throughout the United States—the Chapters alone during the year expending in service for veterans about $2,000,000. The National organization expended $1,735,825—a total of $3,735,825—devoted to assisting war sufferers toward recovery from disability and distress.

This work is constant in hospitals, sanitariums, camps, soldiers' homes, in the community. For example, in helping disabled men and women in places where they were transient residents $170,673 from national funds alone was required to help solve their problems. Every Red Cross service is ever at hand ready to meet the individual need of these men and women.

The enlisted men in the Regular Army, the Navy, and the Marine Corps, with their home ties, mean a never-ending Red Cross service which figures cannot fully interpret. In this work a total of $685,285 was applied in meeting an obligation under the Red Cross charter which has been fulfilled for over 20 years.

Domestic Operations Extensive

In the past year Red Cross operations were almost wholly confined to continental United States and the insular possessions. Relief work following disasters called for immediate activities in 192 places and a total of $737,602.87 was spent in this service alone. In 33 major disasters trained workers were kept at the work of rehabilitation for many months.

In carrying on the health activities a total of $444,886.66 from Red Cross national funds, and $508,000 from Chapter treasuries—approximately $1,252,886 in all—was applied, giving some idea of the extent of Red Cross service in the fields of public health nursing, nutrition instruction, and spreading knowledge of personal hygiene and care of the sick in the home.

For advancing the cause of human safety, the First Aid instruction, locally by Chapters and over extensive national territory by the Red Cross instruction car covering trunk line railroads, and in teaching water-safety and increasing the membership of the Red Cross Life-Saving Corps, the total cost was $288,234.71, of which $216,234.71 came out of national funds.

Army of Over 5,500,000

The Junior Red Cross in the schools—with over 5,500,000 in its "I Serve" ranks—was aided with $233,510.78 to which it is estimated the Chapters added some $277,000—a total of $510,510.78. In various other domestic activities the Red Cross spent $238,473.19, and the Chapters in their numerous voluntary services expended an additional $1,048,000 during the year.

Foreign obligations, aside from Japan, were met with national funds as follows: Relief of refugees in Greece, $200,887.15; Junior Red Cross projects, $55,375.75; League of Red Cross Societies, $165,000; other insular and foreign work, $221,353.31. The American Red Cross budget for 1924-25 is $4,647,790.85, or $868,236.96 less than the budget for the year ended last June 30.

In good deeds for all peoples in time of distress the American Red Cross goes on. Help this work with your membership dollar—join on Armistice Day.

The reason the speeches come after the dinner is because nobody could listen to them before dinner.

Nature's Amends for Toll Taken by Years

The critics have always stumbled a little over this final phase of supreme genius. They used to think that Michelangelo's last work was unfinished. They still often think that what we must recognize in such a manifestation is lassitude, failure of energy, a weakening grasp of brain or hand. I am not sure that there is not an eloquence of truth in such criticism, our serves Havelock Ellis, in the Forum. Only let us not forget that it is the mark of high genius, less to display athletically Titan strength than to be able to use weakness to reach divine ends. That power, it may well seem to us, is supremely visible in the typical last phase of the highest genius. The artist has lost his early power of realistic grip, and with it lost also his early taste for such power. But he has lost it only to attain a wider and deeper and more symbolic mastery of the world. He no longer cares more than he has ever before for its essence, and he is conscious of that essence with a delicacy of sensitive perception he never before possessed. He is no longer concerned with things; they are receding from his view. As he rises above the earth, like Elijah in his chariot of fire, he now sees it only in the distance. Henceforth he no longer deals with things. It is the soul of things that he brings before us. That is why his latter work fascinates us endlessly as, slowly, after the course of our own experience, we begin at last to understand what it means.

Good Stories Told of Famous French Writer

Max O'Rell, the famous French satirist, joked to the end. When he was lying on his deathbed, and after the doctors had informed him that there was no hope, he wrote: "I fear that I am doomed. The doctors give me a few months, but I believe I shall last longer. At any rate I shall try; for I'd rather wear a hat than a halo."

Max O'Rell, like all professional men, was occasionally imposed on with regard to hospitality, hostesses inviting him to an "at home" as a guest and then expecting him to perform, in other words to "tell a few stories."

Once when this happened, he left the drawing room hurriedly and went down to the hall, whence he returned in a few minutes in a state of great excitement, and approaching his hostess whispered agitatedly into her ear: "Madam, what kind of people have you here? The check you placed in my overcoat pocket—my fee for tonight—has been stolen!"—San Francisco Argonaut.

Wars of the Roses

The Wars of the Roses were a series of sanguinary contests for the possession of the English throne, waged by the adherents of the houses of York and Lancaster, whose badges were the white and red roses, respectively. The struggle, says the Kansas City Star, commenced with the battle of St. Albans (1455), and lasted until 1485 when Henry Tudor (of Lancaster) defeated and killed Richard III (of York) at Bosworth field. The two houses were finally united in the person of Henry Tudor (afterward Henry VII), who in 1486 married Elizabeth of York, daughter of Edward IV. It is estimated that the Wars of the Roses occasioned the deaths of 12 princes of the blood, 200 nobles and 100,000 of the gentry and common people of England.

Oldest Almanac

In the British museum is an almanac that is 3,000 years old; it is supposed to be the oldest in the world.

It is written like all other Egyptian manuscripts, on papyrus, and was found on the mummy of an Egyptian, who had treasured it apparently as something sacred, for it is of a strong religious character. Under the days, which are written in red ink, there is a figure followed by three characters, signifying the probable state of the weather.

It is not entire, but it was evidently torn before its owner died. Beyond clearly establishing the reign of Rameses the Great, it contains nothing else of any value.

Doublon Still Current

The doubloon, that famous coin of romance, is still in circulation. The Isabelle doubloon, worth $5, still remains current in Cuba. The doubloon is so called because, when first coined, it was double the value of a pistole—that is, it was worth $5. The name was given later to a double doubloon current in the West Indies. Pieces of eight, with which readers of fiction are familiar, are also in circulation. They are simply Spanish dollars of eight reals. A doubloon dated 1787—there are said to be only six of that date in existence—sold not long ago for $6,200.

Colors to Scare Spirits

The Chinese, as most people know, are extremely superstitious, and have a great dread of evil spirits; they take endless trouble, in all the affairs of life, to circumvent the demons, says the Detroit News. The evil spirits, the Chinese believe, loathe bright colors, especially red, and these lurid decorations are supposed to be very potent in their protective influences. With decorated bull in all sorts of vivid tints and a big eye at the head to enable "it to see," a Chinese junk is a very impressive-looking craft.

LABORS OF LOVE.

Charleroi contains within its domains, probably, as public spirited a class of men and women as can be found in places of similar proportions in the State. They are never remiss in doing their duty, when they realize the importance of, and the need for, fulfilling that duty. Just now there is a duty involved, and that is, contributing to the American Red Cross, through its Charleroi Chapter. This drive is an annual affair, and be said, to meet a certain financial end. Each and every member contributes liberally of their personal funds, and believes that this year the people will not fail the workers in their soliciting for funds to one of the noblest causes coming before the American people. In fact, just in proportion as the residents of Charleroi and surrounding territory contribute, in just that proportion will they be judged as men and women of character, imbued with patriotic impulse to give succor where needed.

It will be recalled that one year ago, the people of Charleroi and surrounding towns were asked to give for the aid of Japan and its suffering people. The response was most noble and generous; and it is to be hoped that the exigencies of the need for assistance to the survivors of the World War—those who cannot support themselves will be given equal if not greater consideration.

Monday evening the local Executive committee and members of the local Chapter held a meeting in the Municipal building to complete arrangements for the intensive drive to be made. The president of the local Chapter, John D. Berryman, than whom there is no more zealous, liberal contributor to the cause in this valley, will welcome suggestions that will tend to enhance the labors of the local workers in this drive; your advice and suggestions will be received in the same loyal spirit in which they are tendered.

FATHER AND SON BANQUET.

Washington Avenue Presbyterians are holding a Father and Son banquet Friday night. This, we believe, while an annual affair, loses none of its popularity with the passing of time. In fact, each succeeding banquet creates more interest than its predecessor.

This year we understand the disciples of John Calvin, inclusive of the ladies of the church, who are the caterers, have prepared to "feed the concourse" on an even more elaborate plan than heretofore. However this may be, the essential function of the banquet is to bring "Dad and son" together in closer relationships, and the planning of the affair can but receive the commendation of the public.

One of the reasons for "family jars" in which sons are so often concerned, lies in the fact that "Dad does not make a confidant" of his son, give him the weight of his superior wisdom and advice, but rather how oft is enmeshed in the intricacies of business to have no time to get acquainted with his son. The closer the ties between father and son, the better it is for all concerned. And let father conduct his life, inwardly and outwardly, so that son may follow in his footsteps, conscious that by so doing he will not err therein.

Great French Dictator Typical of His Race

Napoleon's character and personality are still under the microscope. One of the best of recent analysis of the great commander is "Napoleon," by Herbert A. L. Fisher, at one time British minister of education. Mr. Fisher has made the French dictator luminous by his phrases. Here, for instance, is a passage on Napoleon as a young man, portraying him as a turbulent example of the people from which he sprang:

"The Corsican bore a character for sobriety, courage and hardihood. Late was for him a virtue, vengeance a duty, pardon an infamy. He felt the call of the clan like a Highlander, an Albanian or a Zulu, and was full of the pride and self-assurance common to gallant men who have never met a superior."

"Vigilant and astute in his judgment of character, he was a master of dissimulation save where passion broke in and spoiled the reckoning. "His standard of honor forbade theft, enjoyed hospitality and tolerated woman as the drudge of the household and field. In general his deportment was noted as grave and social. He was spared of amusement, would sit at cards without a word and suffer torture without a cry; but when the seal of silence was once broken, language would stream from him like a torrent, an index of that unsteady, immature quality which was a common attribute of the race."

Probably Girl Never Forgot That Lesson

Stories have a way of accumulating about the memory of famous wits, and one such story is told in the general rule, according to the San Francisco Argonaut. A legend of Swift's anecdotes recently unearthed includes the illustration of the dean's mania for closed doors. Swift's housekeeper hired his servants, but when they came into his employ he always told them there were only two rules to observe. One was always to swing the door after entering a room, the other, always to close the door after leaving the room.

"On one occasion a maid asked the dean's permission to attend her sister's wedding, when he not only gave his permission, but lent her a horse upon which to make the journey, and another servant to accompany her. In the excitement of the moment the unfortunate girl forgot to close the door after her, and Swift, allowing time for her to get well away upon her journey, sent another servant post-haste to bring her back. In fear and trembling the poor girl presented herself before the dean, asking him what he wanted her for. "Only to shut the door," was the reply, "after which you can resume your journey."

The Lasso

Our word lasso is from the Spanish lazo, meaning a snare. The lasso is a rope from 60 to 100 feet in length with a slip-noose at one end. It is used in the Spanish and Portuguese parts of America and in the United States and Canadian West for catching wild horses and cattle. When not in use the lasso, called "rope" in the West, is coiled at the right of the saddle in front of the rider. When an animal is to be caught the rider, galloping after it, swings the coiled lasso round his head and casts it straight forward in such a manner that the noose settles over the head or round the legs of the pursued animal, which is speedily brought down. In order to prevent stiffness of the lasso the lasso great practice is required, and, if possible, instruction by an expert.

Concerning Parrots

Of the 20 commonly known varieties of parrots, the most talkative ones, according to George Bruce Chapman, head of a London house that has imported and sold the birds for more than a hundred years, are the Brazilian Amazon and the African Gray. The former has bright blue and yellow feathers and red tips to the shoulders and flight wings. The African Gray has a red tail. In Brazil natives watch the nesting places and when the fledglings are a few days old, the feathers of one of the wings are trimmed. Later these birds are easily captured, placed on perches and taken to the nearest village. Fanciers say that the birds should be fed twice a day, and with proper care will live 30 years.

—and the health of your family? It's priceless. Yet, many housewives run the risk of serving heavy, indigestible bakings that are the result of an unreliable brand of baking powder. It's the costliest economy anyone ever practiced. And you are not even saving money on baking powder itself, because possesses such great leavening strength that each spoonful goes farther than a similar quantity of many other brands. In the big Calumet Factories—the largest of their kind on earth—every ingredient is put to a severe laboratory test—every fresh output of baking powder is put to actual baking tests. This accounts for Calumet's great uniformity—its unfailing success.

Buy it—use it—forget bake-day failures.

Savings Deposits

There are many people who delay the opening of a Savings Account because they feel that a small deposit will not be welcome and that it is better to wait until they have accumulated a considerable sum. Too often they keep on waiting.

The First National Bank wants you to know that we welcome Savings deposits in any amount from $1.00 upwards and that the size of the account does not matter so much. The REGULARITY with which you save means more to us—and to you—than the amount deposited.
